CASE STUDY 1Cholera Awareness in Aiyu

Outcome: One outcome of the Cholera Awareness with Aiyu Community was that most of the men who participated were able to identify the ways to protect themselves from cholera, but the majority of the women could not.

Analysis: Most of the awareness was conducted in Tok Pisin using a loud hailer. There were many men and women present, but the women sat further away than the men. I later found out that while most of the men could speak Tok Pisin, very few of the women could. After giving the cholera tok save over the loud hailer the audience was asked to break into family groups so that I could work with them to go through the information I had just presented. Unfortunately, this was in the late afternoon and most women had to start preparing meals. The family groups I worked with were usually made up of male family members who said that they would pass on the information to their wives, sisters and daughters.

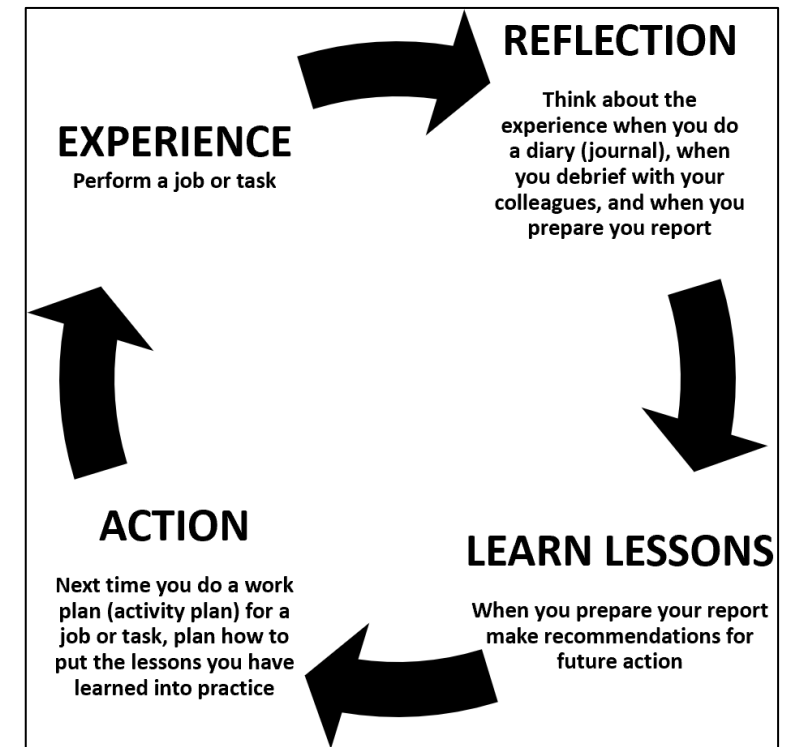

CASE STUDY 2

Paul is a Community Development Worker. Paul has been working with the Warabung community on a project to reduce soil erosion and landslides on the hills around the village. The project involves helping bee farmers from Warabung to nursery young trees, which will then be planted in areas at risk of landslide. The trees that will be planted have flowers so the bee farmers should get more honey, and because of this the bee farmers will have a reason to look after the trees and make sure they are not cut down. Although it will help bee farmers directly, the project should benefit everyone in Warabung community because it will reduce soil erosion and landslides.

Paul visited Warabung to sign the project agreement. During community entry Paul asked the key people to invite everyone in Warabung to the agreement discussion. However, when it was time for the agreement discussion only the bee farmers and the key people were present. When Paul asked why other people hadn't come the key people said that they must have been busy.

During the agreement discussion Paul discussed the terms and conditions of the agreement. One of the conditions of the agreement was that the community of Warabung need to pay a 10% contribution. One of the key people said that they were having trouble getting the community to help raise the funds. They said that the local Member had offered to pay the 10% contribution for them instead. Paul said that the purpose of asking for a 10% contribution was to encourage the community to feel that it was their project. If the Member paid this money instead then the community would think it was the Member's project. The key people agreed to try and get the community to raise the 10% contribution.

At the end of the agreement discussion the key people signed the agreement on behalf of Warabung, and Paul signed on behalf of his organisation. Paul said that once the 10% contribution had been paid, he would return to help start-up the project.
